MISSION WORK RETARDED BY WAR

The Entry of Turkey into the War
Stopped Much of the Work in the Sultan's Country.

(By Associated Press.)
Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 30.—"The entrance of Turkey into the great war has had disastrous results on mission work in the Constantinople region," said Charles T. Riggs, missionary to Turkey, in an address here before the American board of commissioners for foreign missions. "It has taken away from our communities almost all the young men, some of whom have been sent home pathetic wrecks, while others will never return," he continued.

"It has compelled our English and Scotch sister missions to close and the missionary workers to leave. Their school buildings are occupied by the Turks.

"It has completely destroyed our work along the Dardanelles, in Rhodes and many other places, and several pastors and preachers have been deported, while soldiers are billeted in some of our churches and chapels.

"It has completely stopped our publication work, because we can no longer find nor reach our constituency, as well as because of the prohibitive increase in the cost of publication and the restrictions of rigid censorship. "Yet we see bright rays of hope.

Many new doors of access have been opened through the medical and relief work of the Red Cross, in which all our force has been engaged. Moslem pupils are crowding into our schools and even during this "holy war" there have been eager readers of the gospel among the Moslems.

"The Armenian patriarchs and all the Gregorian clergy have shown deep gratitude for our sympathy and hearty appreciation of our work. The restoration of peace is sure to open boundless possibilities of presenting the gospel of peace to receptive souls."

Ouch!

This is an awful joke. Oh, gee!
It's sure to cause a groan;
I am so weak financially,
That I can't stand a loan.

To No One in Particular.
Locate your love, you lose your love,
Find her, you look away;
Now mind I never quite discern,
But trace her every day.

She has a thousand presences,
As surely seen and heard
As birds that hide behind a leaf
Or leaves that hide a bird.

Single your love, you lose your love,
You cloak her face with clay;
Now mind I never quite discern—
And never look away.

UNLAWFUL TO KILL QUAIL
BEFORE DECEMBER 1ST.

On account of numerous inquiries relative to the open season for hunting quail, I beg to herewith call attention to the law pertaining to same. Article 889B, Penal Code of Texas, reads as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any person in this state to kill, entrap, ensnare, or in any way destroy any Bob White, quail or partridge in this state between the first day of February and the first day of December of any year; provided, it shall be unlawful for any person at any time to kill or destroy in one day more than fifteen of the birds or fowls mentioned in this act."

The penalty for violation of this law is by fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than five days nor more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

From the above it is seen that quail can be killed only during the months of December and January.

W. C. DAVIS,
District Attorney.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Dixie.

It is seldom that such an array of brilliant stars are seen in one week as will be the case at the Dixie and the Queen for the next six days. Beginning tonight at the Dixie there is a very attractive and appealing Triangle feature, "The Little Liar," a five-act masterpiece directed by the famous D. W. Griffith, and featuring sweet little Mae Marsh and Robert Harron. There will also be "She Loved a Sailor," one of the funniest Keystone comedies ever made.

Tomorrow Daniel Frohman's Famous Players offer Clyde Fitch's greatest dramatic triumph, "The Woman in the Case," which features Pauline Frederick and a cast especially selected for this dramatic treat. Although universally conceded to be the screen's foremost emotional artist, Pauline Frederick reaches dramatic heights in this great attraction that qualify her as one of the greatest actresses of all time. The Famous Players have reproduced Clyde Fitch's great play with amazing fidelity and dramatic strength, and it is conceded to be one of the finest attractions of the year.

Marguerite Clark at the Queen.

When lovers meet and woo and wed, do the silly geese think that they are determining their own fates? Do the swains believe that they are so handsome that the girls cannot resist them, and do the lassies think that it is their laughing black eyes and saucy smiles that lure the men to propose? Then they ought to pause in their laughter some night and they might catch a faint whisper behind them. It is the fairies discussing whether or not they are suited to each other! If the fairies decide that they are ill mated, they will quarrel and part. If they seem to the little eavesdroppers to be ideally matched, then they will kiss.

That at least is what the Little Lady Eileen firmly believes in the Famous Players' production of that name in which Marguerite Clark will be seen at the Queen Theater Friday night of this week. For Eileen is Irish, with all the rare charm and all the imaginative gifts of the Irish—and she believes in the fairies with all her heart and soul.
